Page 2 Safety data sheets provide information on chemical products that help users of those chemicals to make a risk assessment. They describe the hazards the chemical presents, and give information on handling, storage and emergency measures in case of accident. Safety data sheet information may lead to guidance appropriate for your task. COSHH essentials is a web tool that advises employers on good control practice. By law (see REACH, Chemical classification) suppliers of chemicals must provide an up to date safety data sheet if a substance is dangerous for supply. Caution A safety data sheet is not a risk assessment. You should use the information it contains to help make your own assessment. As well as receiving chemicals you may supply them to others. If you do, you must pass on information (as safety data sheets) to those whom you supply. You can find further information on HSE's REACH web pages and on HSE's CLP web pages Safety data sheets (SDS) for house cleaning supplies and products. What are safety data sheets? And why should we learn how to read safety data sheets? (This should be part of every house cleaner training and maid service training.) Today we Ask a House Cleaner about the globally harmonized system. All chemical manufacturers worldwide have an SDS for every detergent, solution or product they produce. Angela Brown, The House Cleaning Guru says if you don't know the chemical breakdown for solutions you shouldn't use them. These tips and more cleaning advice right here, right now. Listen: Safety Data Sheets (SDS) for House Cleaning Products Watch: Safety Data Sheets (SDS) for House Cleaning Products Hey there, I'm Angela Brown, and this is Ask a House Cleaner. This is a show where you get to ask a house cleaning question, and I get to help you find an answer. Question: Safety Data Sheets (SDS) for House Cleaning Products Now today's question is, "What are Safety Data Sheets and why should I care?" We will talk about this today. Safety Data Sheets (SDS) Will Help You Choose Which Products to Use Safety data sheets are part of the globally harmonized system. Safety Data Sheets also referred to as SDS is mandatory for everybody who produces manufactures and sells a chemical product. This would be things like shampoo, deodorant, toothpaste and your cleaning supplies. So if you call me and you say, "Hey, can I mix Clorox with something else?" I am going to tell you, "Heck no, don't mix Clorox with anything because there may be fatal or toxic results." But my next question is going to be, "What kind of Clorox are you mixing?" I don't know. How many kinds of bleach are there? So you have to go back to the safety data sheet. It's abbreviated to SDS. You got to look that information up. What Kind of Cleaning Products Can Be Mixed With Bleach? There are dozens of bleach products on the market. But let's assume you're asking about Clorox Bleach Regular. Heck, there are dozens of Clorox bleach products. Bleach is a strong chemical that you can dilute with water, but I don't recommend mixing it with anything. Mixing it can create toxic results. I know a house cleaner who mixed bleach with ammonia and the fumes were so bad her eyes started stinging and then she passed out. Mixing chemicals is foolish if you don't know what you're doing. If you're not sure of the chemical breakdown of any particular chemical including Clorox bleach, check the MSDS - BEFORE YOU MIX IT. What is a Safety Data Sheet? (Formerly known as MSDS for Material Safety Data Sheet) A Safety Data Sheet (SDS) is a fact sheet manufacturers are required to provide to the public, to describe the chemical properties of their product. There are 16 sections of a Material Safety Data Sheet. They include brand-specific information such as physical data (solid, liquid, color, melting point, flash point, etc.) They also list health effects, first aid, and reactivity. You will learn storage methods, handling, and proper disposal of the chemicals. You will also learn personal protection and spill/leak procedures. As required by the Occupational Health and Safety Administration (OSHA), the target audience for information in a Safety Data Sheet is the occupation worker who is exposed to chemicals at work. But you can also benefit as a consumer from learning to read an SDS sheet. The Safety Data Sheet for Clorox bleach is 10 pages long and has some pretty detailed information. Here's a screenshot of page 2. I've highlighted with arrows some interesting things you may want to consider before mixing bleach with other chemicals. Hazard Statements Arrow 1: Hazard Statement: Causes mild skin irritation and causes serious eye irritation. Arrow 2: Hazards Not Otherwise Classified: Heart conditions or chronic respiratory problems such as asthma, emphysema, or obstructive lung disease. (Hazards Not Otherwise Classified are also referred to as HNOCs.) Arrow 3: Interactions with Other Chemicals: Reacts with other household chemicals such as products containing ammonia, toilet bowl cleaners, rust removers, or acids to produce hazardous gases, such as chlorine and other chlorinated compounds. Right above arrow 3, you can see that other information includes: Toxic to aquatic life with long-lasting effects. Interesting to know. I'm not picking on Clorox or saying that it's a "bad" chemical. I'm simply pointing out that the MSDS sheet has warnings that need attention. Safety Data Sheets Have 16 Different Sections Here is an OSHA QuickCard that breaks down the sixteen sections of an SDS. Safety Data Sheets Will Tell You Important Information One of the things you'll find on Safety Data Sheets are the hazardous or health warnings. As in what will happen to you if you consume them, touch them or mix them? Does it irritate your eyes? Does it irritate your skin? Is it going to make you sneeze? Is it going to give you bronchial problems? It will specify all those things. Then there will be a warning hazard with pictograms that will alert you to the dangers, and what types of dangers. Safety Data Sheets Will Show the Color Then there will be something on there that will show the physical and chemical properties. It will describe what you're looking at. What is the texture, color, and formation? Is it liquid or powder? If the product is different from what the SDS says, you will know that you have the wrong product inside the container. Here's a tip - don't remove chemicals from their original containers. Before You Buy New Products Whenever you buy a new product for your house cleaning business, try to sample it first. This way, you can see if it causes allergies or if it makes you sneeze, or if you have some kind of reaction to it. If you don't, then you may want to go online and look up the SDS sheet. See if, in fact, that product is clinically and environmentally friendly for your business. Then, think. Is this something that you will want to use for the next year, 5 years or 10 years in your house cleaning business? Even If You Are Not a House Cleaner This advice can apply to the general public even if you don't have a house cleaning company. You might be thinking about buying something new because you saw a new ad on TV. But before you get caught up in the hype of the advertising, check out the products your company uses. Make the safety data sheets for the specific products your cleaning company uses available to your employees. Alright, that's safety data sheets. Until we meet again, leave the world a cleaner place than when you found it.
